I really wanted to study in Scotland, especially Edinburgh, and Heriot-Watt had all of the courses that I needed to take to stay on track. Also the university is situated a bit outside the city center so you get to enjoy both the countryside and the city life in Scotland.

I have learned so much both in classes and by just talking and discussing with people from other countries about everything from cultural differences to politics and of course the Scottish accent (it’s very unique).

Silje Kristine Larsen

Silje Kristine from Norway, studied Business Management and Chemistry courses at our Edinburgh Campus for a semester. Silje Kristine travelled from the Norwegian University of Life Sciences.

The courses Heriot-Watt offers were able to satisfy major requirements for my American University, while also giving me the chance to learn in a heavily group-oriented environment. This kept my graduation on track, and helped to prepare me for my career in a group-oriented field. Being near Edinburgh I was able to get the experience of living near a big city while also having beautiful landscape all around the campus and the city. Edinburgh’s proximity to Europe also encouraged travel to many different countries and cultures which is reflected by the diversity on campus which allowed me to meet and study with people from all over the globe.
